

FBI Tells Court Of Chicago Bug

CHICAGO, June 30 (AP) — An FBI agent said today that a mens' store was wired with hidden listening devices when Sam (Teetz) Battaglia, reputed crime syndicate figure who is now in prison, made three visits to the shop in 1960 and 1961.

Agent Robert L. Malone reported on the electronic eavesdropping at a hearing before Judge Julius J. Hoffman in U.S. District Court.

The hearing was called as a result of Supreme Court ruling that defense counsel and defendants are entitled to examine all logs of electronic surveillance of the defendants.
